WORDS OF WARNING.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND URGED TO REMAIN AT THE CAPITAL.

Prominent Men Picture to Him the Possibilities of an Accident—Nevertheless, He Will Probably Attend the Vice President's Funeral.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—Senator Edmund and Speaker Carlisle recently called on the President and urged him not to go to Indianapolis to attend the funeral of Vice President Hendricks. Edmund said to him that he thought it was the duty of the President, in the present emergency, not to leave the seat of government for any day. He ought not to take any risk of danger until the Senate had elected a president pro tempore. Edmund went on to say that when President Garfield was about to be buried in Cleveland, Theodore Roosevelt and several other senators called on President Arthur and persuaded him not to go. Edmund hoped the President would see that his duty to the nation was higher than his duty to the dead vice president.

Speaker Carlisle added like suggestions, and similar advice was proffered by other public men, chiefly Democratic senators and representatives, including several from Indiana. Some of them are reported as having said to the President that it might be dangerous for him to attend the funeral of Vice President Hendricks. They said that the public mind was somewhat excited, and that the press was commenting upon the fact that the death of President Cleveland would restore the Republican party to power. They were afraid might tempt some person of the Gullible stripe to attempt the life of the President.

Mr. Cleveland's visitors did not like, they said, to discuss the question of his death, but they thought it their duty to advise him to guard his life carefully, as it was now more important than ever that he should not incur any risk. The President thinks these apprehensions exaggerated. He does not feel for any dangers serious in going to Indiana to the funeral of Vice President Hendricks than those which would be encountered on any railway journey of several hundred miles in winter, and those he is not the man to be restrained by fear from doing what he considers his duty. But the representations made by gentlemen induced him to submit the matter to the cabinet. It is understood that the cabinet reiterated the advice given him that it would be wise and proper for him to go. His present purpose is to go. It may, of course, be changed before Monday, when he will start. One of the gentlemen who saw the President, said: "The President's course in regard to the death of Mr. Hendricks and his determination to pay the dead vice president all the respect and honor possible without resorting to any personal considerations will endear him to the friends of Mr. Hendricks. It will be to bury all feeling of the satisfaction that has arisen, and the Democratic party a unit, not only in its support of, but in its affection for, Mr. Cleveland."

Several newspapers in different cities have published editorials urging the President to remain at the capital.

WILL STAY AT WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—President Cleveland Sunday afternoon determined not to make a trip to Indianapolis to attend Vice President Hendricks' funeral. His reasons for not going were stated very fully to a reporter this evening to whom he said: "In the first moment of the shock of Mr. Hendricks' death I yielded to my inclination and declared my intention to be present at the funeral. Of course, in reaching that conclusion I did not put out of view a peremptory press of public business or what I deemed a sufficient consideration of my duty to the people. The public business I thought I could dispose of by additional application and more hours of work, and I considered it to be my duty to the people to answer a tender sentiment of respect and affection to the dead vice president which does them great honor. I am satisfied now that I was at fault in considering the question in that I did not take as comprehensive a view of the duty I owe the public as I should; that is, I did not look at every phase of it, and I am afraid my strong personal desire somewhat clouded my judgment. I am now reminded by some of the best and most patriotic and thoughtful of our citizens that the real and solemn duties of my office are at the national capital, and that in the present peculiar and delicate situation I ought not to take even the remotest chance of accident incident to a trip to gratify a sentiment. I am so and so characteristic as that involved in the subject. I have been profoundly impressed by these considerations, but most of all influenced by their strong and unambiguous presentation by the devoted friends of the late vice president living in the state and city and their endorsement by the noble and patriotic women, who, in the infinite sorrow of her widowhood, reflect the spirit and character of her honored husband, in her solicitude for the public good. I am now certain that neither my desire, nor the sentiment referred to, nor the difficulty that attends in this case a change of design, nor any stubborn idea of heroism will justify me in subjugating the country to and greater chance of disaster than attends my performance of strict duty here, and that I ought not inflict upon my countrymen even the unrest and anxiety, and their departure, absence and return in attendance upon the funeral ceremonies."

New Light on Rheumatism.

"I have been completely disabled from rheumatism. I used Parker's Tonic for kidney disease, when to my astonishment the rheumatism completely disappeared." So writes Mrs. Henry Rogers, of No. 454 Atlanta Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y. Rheumatism arises from the failure of the kidneys to separate the uric acid from the blood.

IN STATE AT HIS HOME.

Indianapolis Follows the Remains of Vice President Hendricks to the Capital.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 30.—The arrangements for the funeral of Vice President Hendricks are now about complete and the order of the procession has been determined upon as follows: Mounted and unmounted police; military band from Columbus; Gen. Fred Knicker, marshal of the day, and staff; Adj. Gen. Koons and staff; military band; the house and guard of honor; Mrs. Hendricks and the family; the president of the United States and members of the cabinet; ex-President Hayes; judge of the United States court; United States senators; members of the house of representatives; governors of states; with their staffs; civic organizations; mayors of cities and officers; members of city council, and other municipal bodies; citizens in carriages.

The procession will be in three divisions, each under a grand marshal and aides. The first division will be from the church through the principal streets of the city to the cemetery.

At the Hendricks residence there were a large number of calls, and the usual crowd of mourners in front. Mrs. Hendricks had a good night's rest and arose much refreshed. At 10 o'clock she and the other relatives united in private devotional exercises.

The burial casket has arrived from Rochester. It is of the same pattern as the one used for the late President Garfield, and is elaborately mounted with solid silver, with fluted white satin lining. On the head cap is a gold and silver plate bearing in old English letters the words "Thomas A. Hendricks."

The body was dressed and put in the casket shortly after noon and the casket was lowered to the front parlor, where it will remain until taken to the court house to be laid in state. At present it is exposed to view through the heavy plate-glass doors, and on all sides are elaborate floral designs. None but the intimate friends are admitted to the casket.

The face of the dead man preserves to a remarkable degree its natural appearance. The eyes are lightly closed, but there is no perceptible discoloration of the features nor glowiness of expression.

Mr. R. H. Foris, the sculptor, has taken a plaster mask of the face and succeeded in securing a very fine impression, from which he will model a bust for the family.

Telegram of condolence continues to come in. John Kelly, who has been in the city for some time, has been in the city for some time, and has been in the city for some time.

A dispatch from the Hon. Edward S. Phelps, minister to England, reached Mr. Hendricks through the state department, and after a few minutes' delay, came from many of cities, memorial meetings and political clubs from all parts of the country.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 30.—The city is crowded with visitors from various portions of Indiana and the hotels are gradually reaching their fullest capacity. The arrangements for transferring the remains of Vice President Hendricks from the family residence to the court house were completed Saturday evening and Sunday were carried into effect. At 10 o'clock Dr. Dr. Jenkins, rector of St. Paul's Cathedral, held a short service in the front parlor, where the remains were lying. Besides the minister there were present Mrs. Hendricks, S. W. Morgan, Mr. Morgan and three sons, Thomas, William and Harry, Mrs. Tamm, Mrs. of Cincinnati, Mr. Abram Hendricks, Mrs. Patterson, Mrs. Dodd, Mrs. D. Walling, William H. English, and the two family servants. The services were brief, but not less impressive.

When the remains were placed in the hearse, the procession moved south to Washington and east on Washington to the south entrance of the court house in the following order:

Department of Police, Columbus Barracks band, Colonel Nick Ruckel and staff, Light Infantry, Emmet Guards, Rice Guards, Strickland's Light Artillery, paid bearers, hearse, committee on arrangements, board of aldermen, common council, Hendricks club.

Major Robbins acted as officer of the hearse, and proceeded the committee on arrangements in the procession. The pall bearers were: Gov. Isaac P. Gray, Ex-Gov. Albert G. Porter, Hon. W. H. English, Judge John W. Hendricks, Mr. Aquilla Jones, Mr. Frederick Reed, Mr. David Macy, Mayor John L. McMaster.

The sidewalks along the line of the route were densely crowded, and each of the cross streets which were packed together near the entire length of the square. Upon reaching the court house the military companies formed on the south side of Washington street, and the casket was removed from the hearse by the pall bearers, and followed by the committee of arrangements, board of aldermen, common council and the Hendricks club, was in the main corridor. From the time the casket was placed in the hearse until they were deposited upon the catafalque, a period of forty minutes, the court house bell and fire bell tolled every five minutes.

The most elaborate arrangement was made in the main corridor of the court house building for the reception of the remains. The walls are decorated with heavy black festoons, and intervals with white streamers. The catafalque is heavily draped in black, over it is erected a canopy which is decorated in black and white. Around the canopy is a profusion of tropical plants, ferns, palms and evergreens and a number of very handsome floral designs. At each corner of the catafalque is a broken column made of silk, carnations, tulips and lilies. On each side of the two at the head of the casket is a white dove, with outstretched wings, bearing on its beak the olive branch of peace. The columns at the foot of the casket are decorated each with a sheaf of wheat. Among the floral designs the most striking is that offered by the Irish citizens. It consists of a circle, with shamrock leaves and green immortelles and a half wreath of natural ivy leaves, with this inscription in immortelles: "Erin Mouras a Fearless Advocate." Below the motto is a scroll of black silk, on which is inscribed in white letters the following:

It is not the tear at a moment's shed. When the cold hearted, false and cruel, That tell how beloved was the friend that fled. Or how deep in our heart we deplore him.

Resting upon the panel is a lamp of marble, roses, lilies and hyacinths. This emblem rests at the head of the casket between the broken columns supporting the white ones. Another design is a casket of flowers with a border of evergreens and a center of white chrysanthemums. In the center, composed of purple immortelles, are the words "Free at Last," almost the last which Mr. Hendricks uttered, and which were said to the physician as indicating that he was free from pain. Another basket of flowers, somewhat smaller, with white chrysanthemums, in the center was the letter "H" in purple immortelles. An offering consisting of a basket of flowers, with a large cross of evergreens and white roses overhanging it, is presented by Madison county. The designs are tastefully arranged about the casket, and the effect is pleasing.

PROBABLY NEVER

In the history of proprietary medicines had any article met success as home equal to that which has been poured upon Hood's SARSAPARILLA. Why, such has been the success of this article, that nearly every family in the world has heard of it, and that nearly every neighborhood has been taking it at the same time. Every week brings new evidence of the wonderful curative properties of this medicine.

Hood's SARSAPARILLA

Combines the best of the vegetable and mineral kingdoms, and in its proportion of active ingredients, its medicinal effect with the least disturbance to the system. In fact this preparation is so well balanced in its action upon the alimentary canal, the liver, the kidneys, the stomach, the bowels and the circulation of the blood, that it brings about a healthy action of the entire human organism, that can hardly be credited by those who have not seen the remarkable results that have followed its use. If the SARSAPARILLA does not prove sufficiently laxative, take a few doses of Hood's Purgative, and you will find it to be a most reliable remedy. That dull, sleepy, sick feeling can be wholly destroyed by the use of Hood's SARSAPARILLA. Give it a trial and be yourself again.

An examination of this city says of Hood's SARSAPARILLA: "It is the strongest SARSAPARILLA I ever saw."

Each dollar bottle contains one hundred capsules, and is sold at all druggists. Price, one dollar, or six for five dollars. Hood's SARSAPARILLA, prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.
